"TALENT's" REACTIONS TO REFUSAL OF LARGE-SCALE AID.

From: NEW YORK

To: MOSCOW

No.: 622

4 May 1944

ANTON[i] has informed TALENT [TALANT][ii] of the impossibility of large-scale one-time aid. Just as we expected, TALENT took this announcement exceptionally morbidly. TALENT considers that his request has not been conveyed to the leadership [RUKOVODSTVO] of the HOUSE [DOM][iii]. He declared that the refusal to help him set up a laboratory or manufacturing business has been repeated several times. He had addressed himself to ~~approached~~ GENNADIJ[iv], STOCK [SHTOK][v] and ANTON. With irritation he stated that the materials handed over by him on one question alone - oil, by his estimate had yielded the Union a saving of millions during past years and the aid requested by him was trifling. In a lengthy talk he said that his help to us was the result of his views on the Union and that he would meet us ~~seriously~~ [.] He emphasised that in future he ~~would~~ ^{intends} to have extensive dealings with people and firms and consequently it is impossible to expect much help from him. If he received information about the prospect of work [8 groups unrecovered] impossible, he will regard this as an attempt to get rid of him altogether. We shall continue meetings.
